Field of the Invention This invention relates to filaments of a high temperature superconducting (HTS) ceramic and, more particularly, relates to precursors for filament formation and to the method of forming such precursors. 2. Description of the Related Art Superconductive alloys comprising elements in the Y, Ba and/or Sr, Ba and/or Ca, and REa

(RE=rare earth) groups are known in the art. Barium Yttrium Oxide (BARIUM YTTER OXIDE), Barium Strontium Yttrium Oxide (BARIUM STRONTIUM YTTER OXIDE) and others are disclosed as superconducting materials in U.S. Pat. No. 3,902,008 to T. L. (Tamio) Kobayashi. Barium Yttrium Oxide is the only Yttrium-containing material currently prepared by the methods described. They are compounds which have a crystal structure that is generally recognized by the art as the pyrochlore structure. According to the aforementioned patent, Yttrium and Barium form a two-valence-electron (2-veer) ion with 1 electron in a 3-tetrahedral 3-veer complex. Because the Barium is present at a tetrahedral position, a three-dimensional network is formed. When the Barium is substituted with Strontium, the resulting compound becomes a more difficult compound to prepare. Strontium is more difficult to replace because of its larger atomic size and reluctance to accept electrons at the tetrahedral position of the 3-tetrahedron. This inability to form compounds that are truly stoichiometric results in a compound that is difficult to prepare, or difficult to prepare in bulk quantities. If the material is prepared in bulk quantities, it is often not sintered homogeneous 6d1f23a050
